Brenda J. Ryther, R.N., M.S.N., is a Researcher at the Center for Health Systems Research & Analysis, University of Wisconsin-Madison. She has worked with consumers, families, health care providers, researchers and regulators for many years to develop, implement and evaluate care systems to improve quality in long-term care services for older adults and people with disabilities. This work includes the development and testing of outcome and performance measures, creating educational materials and protocols, teaching health care providers about the systematic use of information in quality improvement activities, developing and conducting interviews in different community and residential settings, and providing training for nurse leadership development.